Focus on

Brazilian consumption on the growth

Brazilian Association of Aluminum - ABAL presented the figures of 2006 that attested the existence of a potential market to aluminum. According to the association, the results achieved during the last two years, concerning domestic consumption and exportations, confirmed the sector growth. In 2006, domestic consumption of transformed products of aluminum totaled 837.6 thousand tons - 4.4% more than previous year. The most contributive sectors to the performance were Extrusion - with a 6.5% elevation due to the tax reduction in the construction family of service and products, Sheets and Plates (+ 4.5%), and Castings (+5.6%). The total volume of the domestic consumption corresponds to a new record of the aluminum industry that is investing systematically in technology and process improvements. In 2007, ABAL forecast a 5.3% growth of the domestic consumption of transformed products, reaching
